The Artist's Guide to Being Published by The Grannie Annie

www.TheGrannieAnnie.org

If you would like to be published by The Grannie Annie, it would be a good idea to look at a number of illustrations in past volumes or on The Grannie Annie's website. You will find that artists published by The Grannie Annie illustrate stories in their own unique and engaging way. Also be sure to follow The Grannie Annie guidelines provided by your teacher.

The Grannie Annie tends to publish

- Illustrations that measure 6 1/4" x 11"
- Illustrations that are black ink line drawings on white paper, with or without pencil shading
- Illustrations that have a middle ground, foreground, and background
- Illustrations that clearly show the subject of the story
- Illustrations that show action

The Grannie Annie tends not to publish

- Illustrations that reveal a story's surprise ending
- Illustrations that include guns or depict violence

Artists submitting to The Grannie Annie may want to

- Read the story they are illustrating several times
- Create a storyboard—a sequential, visual narrative of the story
- Create several exploratory sketches
- Revisit the story to find details that can be added to the illustration
